LIFE IN THE TRENCHES AT The Club Stables MANILA.

a piece of matting that I had are ranged to protect my back from the hot sun. The next morning we braved it again, but, no; so now we have concluded never to go there any more.

Our mess wagon stays back on the road fully half a mile, and we must cross the open fields in full view of the enemy, if we want to eat, and frequently we are shot at.

Yesterday morning I came near getting it, for a sharpshooter tried to pick me if and four shots came so close to me mat it made my hair stand. During these times of trouble, we are all drawn closer to one another, and the killing of one or wounding of another casts a gloom over us all. Last week two of my company boys passed by my trench just to "take in the eituation." The Filipinos opened fire and killed one and shot the other in the head and his escape from death is a miracle. All this happened not fifty feet from where I was writing and on a spot I had stood many times. Another boy stood back of his trench and got it in the shoulder, so these accidents have taught us to be cautious. We patiently await the arrival of the regulars, and until then we must wait, as al-ready our firing line is twentytwo miles long, and some thirteen thousand men are in the trenches. We cannot afford to go further without weakening our lines, so we must wait, and stand this harassing every day, and some days we have quite heavy scraps. The "Scandia" arrived bringing the 20th Regulars and they were surprised to find themselves being pushed into active service. The poor fellows were suffering from the heat, and they nearly wilted when I told them this was our cool weather, but we have no cool weather—no gladsome spring, no golden autumn, but a continual summer, with the downponer that drenches the earth, and makes growth luxuriant.

The Filipinos will stand this campaign much better than we, especially if the rain comes, as they can stand exposure; they know every foot of ground; a little rice in sufficient for their daily meal, and their guns kill at a much greater distance. The arming of the volunteers with Springfields was a mistake, no, this was not a mistake but was criminal.

Business in Manils is dead, and during the season when there has the insurgents threaten the destruction of the town. The City perhaps constant confinement in Guard (the 13th Minnesotas) have impure vitiated air.
